MANAGER'S COMMENT

On Market

Curbed virus spread and increased inoculation rate have encouraged the western countries to ease pandemic restrictions. Macro data suggested their economies were picking up pace. Growth momentum of the APAC region mostly remained intact. Both the Fed and ECB underplayed the unexpected inflation surge recently and reassured that there will be no premature monetary tightening. On the fiscal side, "blue sweep" of the Biden administration seemed to assure the passage of another coronavirus relief package. The spike in bond yields could be a catalyst for stocks to take a breather but the economic outlook remains positive, supported by coordinated fiscal and monetary policies and successful vaccine distribution.

Global equities registered positive returns in February, while China lagged behind. The market edged higher on additional US stimulus and worldwide vaccination campaign before a rising 10 year US Treasury yield sparked concerns of a taper tantrum, and triggered a global selloff subsequently. Growth and defensive stocks suffered the most. In contrast, the bear-steepening yield curve and deflation regime favored value stocks. Energy related names outperformed as oil prices rose. With the global economic recovery remaining well supported by expansionary policies and the rollout of vaccines, we believe the recent retracement was temporary and continue to underpin a long-run bullish narrative for pro-cyclical stocks.

On Portfolio

The Sub-Fund outperformed benchmark in February. Pro-cyclical positioning and positive stocks selection in Information Technology, and Consumptions related names contributed the most. Initial round of deflation and rising bond yield early in a business cycle has historically been an indication of economic growth ahead. Barring an inflation spike driven by significant supply shock, the progress in the current inoculation continues to support a pro-cyclical positioning in the portfolio.

The value of the investment products managed by BOCI-Prudential Asset Management Limited represents 9.4% of the Sub-Fund's fund size.
